HOW TO HELP YOUR TEEN BE SAFE

Teens who are close to their parents are less likely to engage in risky behaviors.

- ◇ Make yourself available to your teen. Establish a regular time to be together.
- ◇ Make sure your teen understands the danger of going someplace alone with a new acquaintance.
- ◇ Come up with a plan with your teen and practice what he or she will say and do if someone makes them feel uncomfortable; you know, that "uh-oh" feeling.
- ◇ Know where your teen is and with whom. Know how to contact her or him.
- ◇ Tell your teen if she or he feels unsafe, you will pick her or him up anytime, anywhere, without questions.
- ◇ Make sure your teen knows your rules and limits.
- ◇ Trust your instincts. If something or someone your teen is involved with doesn't seem right, follow through and intervene. The average age difference between a teen and her assailant is 10 years.
- ◇ Walk the walk - be a role model and a day to day living example of your value system.
- ◇ The more involved you are in your teen's life, the more valued he or she will feel and the more likely he or she will respond to your guidance.

WHAT TO DO IF A SEXUAL ASSAULT OCCURS

If you are unsure about what to do call 1.800.656.HOPE and you will be connected to a rape crisis center in your community.

- ◇ Reassure the teen that the assault is not their fault, no matter what.
- ◇ If the sexual assault just occurred, have the teen go to a safe place.
- ◇ Encourage the teen to call or offer to call a rape crisis center or the police. Tell the teen that there is a special team available to help and the police may offer a sexual assault exam to collect evidence.
- ◇ In addition to having someone the teen trusts during the law enforcement interview, the teen has the right to a victim advocate who specializes in working with this type of assault. Also reassure the teen that the details of the assault will be kept confidential.
- ◇ Even if the teen decides not to have the sexual assault exam, encourage the teen to see a doctor to be treated for sexually transmitted diseases and pregnancy. The doctor is required to report the incident to the police, however the teen doesn't have to talk to the police.
- ◇ Instruct the teen not to destroy evidence if possible. This includes washing clothes, showering, douching, eating, chewing gum, smoking, brushing teeth and gargling. However, reassure the teen that if any of these things have been done, evidence may still be found.
